Unregulated use of wireless phones on public aircraft is a bad idea, mainly because virtually everyone on the plane carries a phone, some more than one. If even half of them make or receive calls, the noise level on the plane will be unbearable and create enumerable confrontations. Why not limit the capability to data, SMS, etc?